EXTORTIONIST'S FINGER TRACED TO COLUMBUS

Threat Sent Cleveland Man Believed Taken from O. S. U. Medical School.

SUSPECT STUDENT PLOT

Police Believe Sender May Have Had Access to Autopsy Room.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., April 9 — Search for the extortionists who sent a human finger to John B. Wilberding, prominent Cleveland business man, with a demand for $3,000, turned today to Columbus.

Doctors at Western Reserve medical school told police last night that the finger had been traced to a Columbus medical school. It had been hacked and torn from the hand of a dead man.

Police Chief W. G. Barrows of Cleveland Heights said the plot probably was conceived and executed by some student who had access to the school's autopsy room.

The finger and an extortion letter were left in the mailbox of Wilberding's apartment. Wilberding, 59, is president of a building and loan company.

60 BODIES EXAMINED

Search in Extortion Plot Centers on Ohio State Medical School.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 9—Sixty bodies at the college of medicine at Ohio State university were being examined today to determine if a finger is missing. The bodies are at the school for dissecting purposes.

The examination started following a report from Cleveland Heights detectives that they had traced to Columbus the source of a human finger sent to a Cleveland financier in an extortion plot last Monday.

The detectives declared they had traced the finger to a Columbus medical school, but refused to name the institution. The college of medicine at Ohio State university is the only medical school in Columbus.

Dr. Francis L. Landacre, chairman of the department of anatomy, said that so far as he knew no fingers were missing from any of the bodies and discredited the theory that the finger had been traced here through the type of preservative used at the school. "Most all preservatives are standardized," he said. "The type used at the university is merely a mixture of alcohol and formalin. They are all alike."

SAFE CRACKERS FAIL TO OPEN STORE SAFE

Amateurs, Police Say, as Wrong Technique Is Used; Blocked Office Doors.

Safe crackers made an unsuccessful attempt to open the safe in the office of the Woolworth store on west Center street last night.

The fact that they devoted their efforts to hammering the handle from the door instead of the combination, led police to believe that they were amateurs.

So far as could be determined this morning, Manager F. M. Sage said, nothing had been taken. The covers on the tables, he said, were not disturbed and nothing in the office had been taken.

Forcing open a basement door leading into the boiler room, the would-be safe crackers blocked each door leading to the office with wooden wedges to facilitate escape in event of discovery.

The attempted robbery was discovered when the store was opened this morning.

CASH BONUS DEBATE OPENS IN CONGRESS

Seen as Forerunner of Bitter Struggle for Next Week.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 9—Representative Dyer, Republican of Missouri, told the house today that France "is trying to undermine and destroy the American dollar."

He made this statement in a speech opposing cash payment of the soldiers' bonus.

"This country," Dyer said, "is suffering from the fact that it loaned millions to foreign countries it can not expect to collect. I am sorry today that I voted for this country to enter the World war.

"Today France is not the friend of America. She is trying to undermine and destroy the American dollar.

"Instead of France and Europe paying their debt of gratitude for all we did in the war, we have received nothing but criticism."

The bonus debate, foretelling the bitter struggle to begin next Monday before the ways and means committee, began with a speech by Representative Bulwinkle, Democrat of North Carolina reminding the veterans they owed the government as great a debt during peace as during war.

BANDIT SLAYS POSSE LEADER

"Pretty Boy" Floyd, Notorious Outlaw, Blamed for Oklahoma Murder.

VICTIM IS EX-SHERIFF

Shot to Death in Raid on Hideout of Long-Hunted Criminal.

By The Associated Press

TULSA, Okla., April 9—Irv Kelley, former sheriff of McIntosh county, was shot to death early today in a raid on the farm home of Ben Hargraves, father-in-law of Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd, notorious Oklahoma outlaw. Officers said he was slain by Floyd.

Officers said Kelley had led a posse to the Hargraves home, but had dismissed its members a short time before the shooting in the belief that Floyd was not at home.

They said Floyd escaped in a motor car with a man they identified as Earl Birdwell who also is wanted for a series of bank robberies and other crimes.

Officers had been watching the Hargraves home all night on the strength of a tip that Floyd and Birdwell were in hiding there. Kelley, since his defeat for reelection as sheriff of McIntosh county, had been working for the reward of approximately $10,000 posted for Floyd's arrest.

Floyd has had two gun battles with Tulsa police within the past 60 days, escaping unscathed each time, although one detective was wounded in the battles.

HUNT FOR LINDY JR. MOVES FROM BRITAIN

American Sleuth Leaves for 'Somewhere on Continent' To Continue Search.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, April 9 — Major Charles H. Schoeffel of the New Jersey state police who came here at the beginning of the week in connection with the search for the Lindbergh baby, left England today for "somewhere on the continent."

Even Scotland Yard said they didn't know where he was going or what he was going to do. His last activities here were on Thursday when he went to some provincial town, presumably Birmingham, in pursuit of his investigation.

* * *

HOPEWELL, N. J., April 9 — It is 39 days since Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's son was stolen and the mystery seems no nearer solution.

A tenuous theory that the kidnaping and a brush fire that menaced the Lindbergh home recently were connected in some way was blasted last night. Police said they investigated and found no evidence the fire was incendiary. A suggestion had been made that both the kidnaping and fire were possibly motivated by spite.

Three Norfolk, Va., intermediaries appeared at a standstill in their attempts to get the baby back.

* * *

TORONTO, Ont., April 9— The Globe says today: "Suspecting that members of the purple gang of Detroit might be implicated in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, two state investigators, L. Hutson and William Watkins, from Lansing, Mich., are endeavoring to develop contacts with an underworld clique in Montreal.

AUTO SKIDS, OVERTURNS

Child's Cries Lead to Discovery of Parents Pinned Under Machine.

Special to The Star

MARENGO, O., April 9 — Mrs. Chris Bennett, 23, of near Fulton, south of Mt. Gilead, was instantly killed last night in an automobile accident a mile and a half west of here on the Ashley road.

Her husband suffered torn ligaments in one of his shoulders and arms while their two-year-old baby escaped uninjured.

Mrs. Bennett was a sister of Mrs. Clyde L. Porter of 275 Cass avenue, Marion.

Fifteen minutes after the automobile skidded off the road, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Hall of Ashley, who were driving by, discovered the wreckage when attracted by the cries of a baby coming from a field.

Neck Broken

The Halls found the child walking around the wreckage crying for its mother. The parents were pinned under the automobile. The father was unconscious and the mother was dead. Her neck was broken. She died instantly.

With the help of neighbors, the automobile, a Ford roadster, was lifted off the bodies and an ambulance called.

The Bennett auto skidded off the wet highway and overturned in a field. The family was on its way to Delaware where Mr. Bennett's mother is seriously ill.

Formerly of Delaware

Mrs. Bennett's body was taken to Ashley and an ambulance took her husband to Delaware for medical aid. He was later taken to the home of his parents.

Mrs. Bennett was formerly Miss Martha Hrittier of Delaware. Besides the husband and child, she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Ida Larkins of Delaware, two brothers, John and Robert Trittier of Delaware and three sisters, Mrs. Porter of Marion, Mrs. Verna Curtis of Delaware county and Mrs. Verdie Geyer of Morrow county. Mrs. George Bennett of Delaware was her mother-in-law.

No funeral arrangements have been made.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS CLEVELAND SLAYING

Library Watchman Clubbed to Death by Unknown Assailants; Revenge Blamed.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., April 9—A 64-year-old watchman in a branch of the Cleveland public library was clubbed to death early today by unidentified assailants.

The watchman, Thomas Givney, was found unconscious inside the library, and died a few minutes later in a hospital.

Deep mystery surrounded the case. Givney did not recover consciousness to explain it. The library had not been robbed.

Police theorized the killing was motivated by revenge. Givney carried an old newspaper clipping in his pocket which told how he had fought off two men who clubbed him outside the library about a year ago, and who escaped.

The aged watchman was found today by a charwoman. His clothing was torn, one pocket ripped out and his wallet was open, indicating he had been robbed. He had put up a battle but his gun lying beside him apparently had been wrenched from his possession before he had an opportunity to use it.

ECONOMY CONFERENCE SEEKS WAY TO HUGE EXPENSE SLASH

Boy, Only Slightly Hurt When Run Over by Engine

Run over by a switch engine, Otto Artopoeus, 11, of 295 Chicago avenue, was stiff and sore this morning and confined to his bed, but otherwise seemed none the worse for his harrowing experience of yesterday afternoon.

The boy and a companion were taking a short cut home from an errand and Otto stepped up on the tracks near the old Studebaker-Wolfe plant at the Grand avenue railroad crossing.

He looked up, saw the engine bearing down on him and in his sudden fright, stumbled before he could jump off the tracks.

"I seemed to be rolling and rolling and then finally I got awful dizzy," he told his mother. His friend said he could see Otto rolling under the engine.

After the engine passed over Otto, he jumped to his feet, brushed his clothes and started for home. C. F. Shepherd, a member of the engine crew, saw that the child was suffering from shock and took him home. A physician was called and advised that although Otto's injuries were not serious he be kept in bed for several days.

Otto is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Artopoeus.

CITY TEACHER'S CONDITION FAIR

Extent of Eye Injury Suffered by Miss Foreman Not Definitely Determined.

AWAIT DEVELOPMENTS

Operation Performed To Mend Damage Caused by Flying Glass in Crash.

Miss Lucile Foreman of 733 east Church street was in a fairly comfortable condition today at University hospital in Columbus, following a major eye operation yesterday afternoon, Dr. A. D. Frost, Columbus specialist, said.

Miss Foreman's right eye was seriously injured by flying glass when a car in which she and four other Marion teachers, bound for a state educational meeting at Ohio State university, skidded on street car tracks in north Columbus and crashed into a telephone pole.

Miss Rauhauser in Hospital

Miss Patsy Rauhauser of Linden place, driver and owner of the car, was still confined to the hospital today suffering from shock and severe bruises. The other members of the party, Miss Margaret Wolfley of east Church street, Miss Mabel Turney of Delaware, O., and Miss Grace Kline of Thew avenue, all returned home yesterday.

"Miss Foreman's right eye and eyelid were cut and the injuries were serious but all operating has been performed and the damage carefully repaired," Dr. Frost said this morning.

He would give no definite statement regarding the vision of the injured eye, stating that it would be several days before the question of sight in the right eye could be ascertained, and that until then nothing could be determined as to the possibility of impairment of the vision in the left eye. "There is no immediate danger to the other eye," he added.

In Hospital Two Weeks

Dr. Frost is considered among the leading eye specialists in this part of the country. He is associated with the university and is with Dr. Hugh Beatty of Columbus.

Miss Foreman will be confined to the hospital for at least two weeks, hospital attaches said today. She is dramatic coach and teacher of American literature and journalism at Harding High school.

Generosity Has Limit, Screen Star Believes

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES, Calif., April 9 — With the upkeep of her brother, William Koenig, as the point of controversy, Mae Murray, film actress, was at odds with the county welfare department today.

Frank Shaw, county supervisor, announced he intended to proceed under the California pauper act to recover from Miss Murray money donated by the county to keep Koenig's family from destitution. Miss Murray

Mae Murray made no attempt to deny the relationship, but was indignant at Shaw's announcement.

"I am surprised and naturally a bit indignant that any official should announce that he is going to take legal steps to collect some money from me before he has asked me whether I am willing to pay it," she said.

Records of the county welfare department show Koenig, under the name of William King, his wife and their two children, had been referred to the department by the assistance league in November, 1931, as being in destitute circumstances. A total of $119.52 was advanced them.

Miss Murray, declaring she had not seen her brother since she was a child, until 10 years ago, said she had him placed in a sanitarium when he first came to California and had advanced him money for several years.

"Finally, I concluded I had made a serious mistake in encouraging him to live in idleness," she said. "I have here a letter from his wife which shows she agreed with me."

"There should be some limit to generosity," she added.

Life Completed for Master of Silver Flute

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 9—For Julius Spindler, life is over at 65; and the silver flute he played against the background of Damrosch and Sousa bands has been put away.

Spindler, who ranked among the best flutists of his generation, who toured with Sousa's band and was assisting artist at concerts given by Sembrich and Melba, has joined the Salvation army. To earn his keep he will sweep and dust; be a sort of handy man—this white haired Julius Spindler whose fingers have raced swiftly and expertently in obligato to great voices.

"I won't play ever again," he said today. "I could not profane that flute with a single false note. I am trying to forget—what has been. It was beautiful; but it is over. I am old. These fingers are no longer quick and nimble. I have come here not to live. For me, life is over. I have come here—to die."

The silver flute, dear to him as a child to its parent, is tucked carefully away in his locker. With it is the uniform he wore as a bandsman under John Philip Sousa.

"My nerves are gone," he said. "My eyesight is failing. So I have come to this hospital."

GERMANY PREPARES FOR NEW ELECTION

Nation To Choose Between Von Hindenburg and Hitler in Second Poll Sunday.

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, April 9—The second political battle of Von Hindenburg vs. Hitler, the greatest electoral contest in the history of Germany, was all but ended today as more than 37,000,000 voters prepared again to elect a president of the Reich.

In contrast with that which preceded the first (and indecisive) election four weeks ago, the campaign for tomorrow's voting has been brief but bitter. Held down by the decree proclaiming a political truce over the Easter holidays, it did not begin until last Sunday.

Hindenburg Forces Confident

Followers of Von Hindenburg, the 84-year-old former field marshal of the Kaiser's armies, were confident that he would win. They based their confidence of the fact that he fell short of a clear majority over all candidates in the election of March 13 by only 174,328 out of 37,658,036 votes. In tomorrow's election a simple plurality will reelect him.

Only one of the five candidates who participated in the March election has withdrawn.

Lieutenant-Colonel Theodore Duesterberg, candidate of the steel helmet organization, declined to make the second race. The four who remain on the ballot are: Paul Von Hindenburg, non-partisan; Adolf Hitler, National Socialist; Ehnst Thaelmann, Communist, and Adolf Gustav Winter, re-evalationist, who is now serving a term in a Saxon jail.

The battle is between Hindenburg and Hitler, who was runner-up in the March election but who trailed the veteran field marshall by more than 7,000,000 votes.

Claims Made for Hitler

Leaders of Hitler's National Socialist party claim they have 1,000,000 members enrolled and they predicted today that Hitler would receive 15,000,000 votes tomorrow.

The Republican "iron front" has held 66,000 meetings from one end of Germany to the other in support of Von Hindenburg.

Although the week has been remarkably free from disorders, beginning at noon today, police reserves will be held in readiness for an emergency until the polls are closed tomorrow night.

AWAIT RULING ON NEW RELIEF LAWS

Decision on Municipal Garden Project Held Up Temporarily by Mayor.

Scofield will await detailed interpretations of Ohio's new relief laws passed during the special session of the legislature.

This is the report given to the garden committee of the Family Welfare society last night by the mayor.

In the meantime, the committee, through the Marion chamber of commerce and the Marion "At Work" civic committee, will continue its effort to put unemployed men at work cultivating gardens on vacant lots. Contributions of vacant lots for this purpose and the applications of unemployed men for lots to cultivate are being received at the chamber of commerce office.

This announcement came last night from the venerable justice and may leave some 300 women in various parts of the United States somewhat disappointed.

Like the proverbial woman, Justice Harrison has changed his mind about his recent decision to get married again, saying "there are so many wonderful women that I don't see how I can make a choice."

"I have received about 300 letters from women," he said, "and I think I'll just go on writing to all of them and not march up to the altar. How would it be if I was just a correspondence school husband to all?"

RAIL FLAW DETECTOR USED IN YARDS HERE

New York Central Sends Equipment Here To Test Track for Defects.

The New York Central's rail flaw detector car is spending this week-end in Marion while engaged in checking for flaws the rails of the Big Four railroad in this vicinity.

The detector car equipped with elaborate electrical equipment which detects flaws in railroad rails which the eye can not see, is a complete unit, furnishing its own power and generating its own electricity for detecting flaws.

Contact brushes travel along the rails on a specially built unit suspended from the bottom of the car. As these pass over the rails at a speed of approximately five miles an hour, the electrical impulses generated in the car are recorded in proportion to the density of the steel in the rails. Transverse fissures, hidden to the eye affect the density of the steel and cause a variation in the electric impulses. This is recorded on a moving tape. Operators say the device will detect flaws in rails within an eighth of an inch of their position.

The car includes living quarters for the crew of four. It cost more than $100,000, is 73 feet long and weighs 150,000 pounds.

It will complete coverage of Big Four tracks next week at Cleveland.

Former Marion Sheriff Represents Department of Agriculture; Explains Method To Be Followed by Farmers in Obtaining Aid from Finance Corporation.

Instructions to Marion county farmers desiring to make application for loans under the plan of the reconstruction finance corporation were announced here today by James A. Deal, former Marion county sheriff, now special agent for the department of agriculture. Deal represents Marion and other counties in this district.

Applications for loans may be filed with any member of the committee of three named to take charge of loans in this county. This committee is composed of Robert E. White, cashier of the National City Bank & Trust Co., David Cope, Richland township farmer, and William Wilson, a farmer of Morral. Application blanks also may be obtained at the Farm bureau office.

Applications, when properly prepared, must be filed with one of the committee of three. Blanks for applications are expected to arrive within a day or so.

Deal called attention to excerpts from a bulletin prepared by Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, pertaining to the loans. "No loans will be made to any applicant who has a means of livlihood other than farming, nor to a minor. No loan will be made to any applicant who did not operate a farm in 1931. Loans will not be made for a total acreage of crops in excess of the average of the acreage planted by the borrower in 1930 and 1931. Loans will not be made for the purchase of machinery or livestock, or for the feeding of livestock other than work stock used in crop production, or for the payment of taxes, debts or interest on debts.

"No loans for crop production in 1932 will be made to any applicant in excess of $400. The total amount of loans to the tenants of any one landowner in a single county shall not exceed $1,600.

Loans will be made by the Marion county committee only on property located in this county," Deal said.

Rebirth Is Necessity

A SERMONETTE

BY REV. IRVIN KAUFFMAN,
Pastor Greenwood Evangelical Church

John 3.7—Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again

THIS is a very old doctrine, but it is by no means an outworn one. It is one of the rare things that never lose their original freshness Gypsy Smith says "It is as new as the sunlight that streams through the gates of the morning It's as fresh as the dew drops that hang like so many of God's diamonds sparkling in the sunshine. It's as beautiful as the tones on a June morning It is as fresh as a breath from the hills of God."

It is not only new but it is necessary It is absolutely necessary because it is the only way we can reach heaven. Many try to climb up some other way through church membership, baptism, good works, etc But heaven isn't reached in that way. Jesus said, "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

It is absolutely necessary because it is the only way whereby a man can be brought to understand and appreciate spiritual things An unsaved person is apt to find a church service the dullest thing on earth That is to be expected. We are told in the Word—"The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned." Therefore, since a church service has to do with spiritual things it is no wonder that the natural man finds it dull When a Christian speaks of his hope of heaven an unsaved person cannot appreciate his enthusiasm The thought of fellowship with God has no appeal to him The comfort and inspiration of the Bible means to him absolutely nothing The satisfaction of prayer—he can not comprehend it. Of course not. Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God.

It is absolutely necessary because it is the only way whereby a man may be brought to know God and made willing to engage in his service. This experience is really at the root of all genuine Christian service. It has come to be a common thought in our modern church program that the way to get people interested in spiritual things is to give them something to do. But in carrying out this thought another problem has arisen—How are we to keep them interested until the work assigned them is completed? It is easily seen that this course of procedure leads in a circle and gets us no where. If we want to get people interested in spiritual things we must bring them face to face with the fact that Jesus said—Ye must be born again.

The experience of the new birth is the very first essential in all things spiritual If you want to enter heaven if you want to appreciate spiritual things, if you want to know God: Ye must be born again

Indian and not dead either. ... would ask him about old ball players. In the old vaudeville days I used to be around base ball and ball players, and knew a big part of them personally. Well just name after name I would ask him about, names that us middle agers, and old timers were almost raised on. Names like Hans Wagner Just think of what that man for 20 years contributed of enjoyment and thrills of American life. Chief Bender, the greatest strategist pitcher of all time. Mordeci Brown, Johnny Evers, and dear Tris Speakers, perhaps the greatest outfielders of all time.

Oh I could just sit here and mention em by the hour. I dont mean the ones that were great, and then since have managers jobs. Like lovable Walter Johnston, but the ones who did their bit for the best years of their lives to make America a better place to live in from 3 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and all over our land either minor league or Majors. They were highly specialized men, trained from boys in a highly specialized field, eat, slept and dreamed their trade.

Old at 35

Of course you will say, "Well they were well paid, why dident they save?" Did you ever try working six months, then laying off six, and seeing how much you could save? If they were thrifty they naturally bought them a home. Well they commence passing over the hill of oblivion at the decrepid old age of perhaps 35. Why what was in store for him. My goodness you can be specialized in any line of work in America and you cant get a job, so what is a ball player going to do? You dont ever read a paper where any of em took up our popular mode of living, crime and racketeering. Every one of em are highly respected citizens in their communities. Dozens of em hundreds of em havent any of the world goods, but they got their neighbors respect.

Football is great. It's a great thrill, its a fine recreation, but its for a pastime and physical conditioner while our fine young men are in colleges. But baseball is a profession, its an art that you don't learn in any four years just from September to December. We will never get things really righted in our Country till every line of sport, industry, proffession or trade have some system of everyone contributing while working to the welfare of the old and unemployed in his own line. I dont mean to put all ball players in an old ball players home, I mean a system of help where its done and they retain their respect and courage and self esteem. Outsiders dont have to know they are being aided at all.

All Were There

All the sporting writers from the east that are covering the Giants and Detroit teams training were there, along with our local boys. All a fine bunch of fellows. Tille Shaffer the old Giant who the world has of course been good to. Fred Snodgrass, Bucky Harris, a very smart manager and high class capable young fellow. Boreman Bulger, the fine old sports writer was the toastmaster. Eddie Mayer our local fine fellow. There was a host of em. Among the new was Bill Terry, the king of first basemen today. Freddie Lindstrom, all around player.

A mixture of the old and the new, all giving or had given their lives to entertainment of the public, paying respects to McGraw who after all these years is still at the top of the heap, the fairy godfather to more old time ball players than any man living. All these have contributed to what made our country proud of its sports. Good luck to em. Long may they live, and the umpire good fortune give em an even break.

This picture has won the official approval of the U. S. George Washington bicentennial committee. Clarence Whitehill, baritone and character player of the Metropolitan Opera company, enacts the role of the first president. Sunday is the bicentennial blossom festival opening date and a particularly fitting time to open the picture.

The Cream of All Creams

When you shop—

Do you buy what you want

OR WHAT SOMEONE WANTS TO SELL YOU?

What a pleasure it is to shop when you know exactly what you want and can get it without trouble.

And what dissatisfaction often follows, if you let yourself be talked into buying some other article instead!

You probably know how disappointing such purchases often are. Most women do! For even at the grocery or drug store insistent salespeople will sometimes urge you to buy something "just as good" as the product you request.

When you ask for certain products which you know are dependable, why should any clerk insult your judgment by insisting that you take other brands instead?

There is always a reason. Usually a very selfish one!

At times, of course, a store "runs out" of [illegible] ask for. But some stores seem to be [illegible] the time. Others, even though they [illegible] want, will very often try by sheer persuasion to sell you some other in its place.

When this happens, frequently it is because the merchant reaps extra profit, or the clerk a commission, by switching you to the unknown and often inferior merchandise!

Many of the best stores everywhere forbid this practice. When you buy from them you are always sure of getting exactly what you ask for; certain of receiving full value for the merchandise you want for every penny you spend.

But if you are offered something "just as good" as the thing you ask for, be firm! Insist on packaged products which you know through experience, by brand, or by the reputation of the maker. Such products are often advertised in this newspaper. Be guided by what you know, and you will always be sure of full value for your shopping dollars.

Daily Proverb—There are some who use humility to serve their pride.—Dunham.

Mayor Cermak is said to have saved thirty per cent. of the cost of operating Chicago's government in March. The pickings up there must have been pretty generous heretofore or mighty slim last month.

W. W. Kingsbury, sought for slaying his former partner, Leo Meistrell, at Booneville, Missouri, Thursday night, committed suicide in Valhalla cemetery, St. Louis, Friday. In some way, at some time, punishment is exacted for every crime.

Secretary of State Stimson is said to hope that he can persuade the Geneva conference to scrap submarines and bombing aviation. Mr. Stimson means well, and let us wish him success, but it would prove embarrassing to hold one's breath until France, by way of illustration, signs on the dotted line.

Before considering a proposal, yesterday, to abolish the farm board, the house defeated an effort to increase its 1933 appropriation from $1,000,000 to $1,380,000. What's the idea of the board? Is it contemplating some more $75,000 salaries?

The senate appropriations sub-committee has made a ten-per-cent. slash in the $124,000,000 total of the state, justice, commerce and labor supply bill, including a reduction of more than $1,000,000 in the prohibition enforcement fund. Under such conditions, the least the sub-committee can do is to recommend that the senate show its good faith by slicing into its own expenditures, including its pay.

Major General Smedley D. Butler, retired, who is campaigning in Pennsylvania for the Republican nomination for senator, says that, if he is elected, he will clean up the United States senate. Huh! Smedley couldn't even clean up Philadelphia!

Attorney General Gilbert Bettman recommends a modification of the eighteenth amendment to permit each state to settle its own liquor problem. Maybe it's possible, but it's hard to see how that plan would put the rollers under rum-running and bootlegging, and in them we have the agencies which are financing crime, which today is the greatest menace, its ramifications considered, facing the country.

The villagers of Trenton, Nebraska, are rejoicing that they do not have to pay taxes next year, having accumulated a surplus of $10,000 from their municipally-owned utilities. It would be interesting to know how much has been checked off for depreciation and how much laid aside for reproduction of worn-out machines.

Jack Guzik, reported business manager of the Capone underworld syndicate, who has been committed to Leavenworth prison for a five-year term for dodging the income tax, chartered a special car for the trip, not caring to ride with the "common herd," probably. When the law begins to treat all criminals alike, it may prove something of a deterrent to crime. Certainly it will stop the glorification of the crime business to at least a degree.

Too Much Thunder.

Germany, preparing for the run-off balloting Sunday for the presidency of the reich, is heating up under new rushes of oratory. Perhaps the most interesting comment on the situation that exists on the eve of election day is the suggestion that Adolf Hitler, having thundered his loudest without winning the election last March 13, is having difficulty augmenting his oratory to attract additional votes in the run-off. His speeches, these days, are disastrously anti-climatic.

Chancellor Heinrich Bruening, on the other hand, is in a stronger defensive position than ever as he defends the administration of the aged Paul von Hindenburg. He has been speaking in a tone of calm persuasion; he has not thundered. Speaking in behalf of Germany's greatest living military hero, he has not found it necessary to appeal overtly to popular emotion, because the appeal is inherent in his candidate.

Apprehension that settlement of the German election may effect the United States directly has been lessened by the fact that on the point of reparations the conflicting major parties have drawn close together. The budget for the fiscal year 1932-33, now in preparation, makes no provision for reparations. The United States stands to lose, regardless of which party wins. A Hitler victory would cause more excitement, but in the long run it probably wouldn't bring about any greater changes in Germany's relations with the rest of the world.

Soaking the Rich.

How the estates of people of wealth, who died in 1928, 1929 or 1930, have been wiped out through the operation of the federal estate tax has again been called to the attention of congress by a notable case of the kind in Chicago.

Reuben H. Donnelly, a publisher of that city, died in February, 1929, leaving as the major portion of his estate 88,000 shares of stock in a well known corporation, which the government, following its practice, valued at the market price at the time of the death of the testator, which was $130 a share, making a total valuation of $11,240,000. This put the stock in the twenty per-cent. class, and thus the tax assessed against it was $2,248,000. Today this stock is worth $10 a share on the market, which would make the value of the 88,000 shares $880,000, or $1,368,000 less than the tax assessed against it. Thus the heirs, to get themselves square with the government, must give up the equivalent of the value of the stock they inherited and $1,368,000 in addition thereto. In other words, the government, instead of taking twenty per cent. of the value of the stock, or one-fifth, has assessed against it a tax amounting to 100 per cent. of the stock's value today and $1,368,000 more.

As a matter of fact, the $130 a share valuation placed on the stock by the government was a fictitious one and utterly without justification. The stock was not bought by the testator for speculative purposes, but had been in his name and that of his family for years. Neither the book value, dividends nor corporate earnings ever justified even half the valuation placed on the shares by the government in accepting as their true value the figures to which the shares were boosted by the operatives of stock market gamblers, over whom the family had no control and with whom it had no connection.

In the words of the attorneys representing the heirs in an attempt to prevent the residue of the estate from being swallowed up by the government, the entire estate having been appraised at approximately $14,000,000, "to tax the transfer of that stock on the basis of $130 per share would be to tax it on a basis of value to which it never attained and probably never will."

Cases in which estates have been eaten up by death taxes are in no sense of the word rare. They have been a number of such cases in the same city and scores, even hundreds, of them throughout the country, but this is the first case which has come to the notice of this newspaper in which an estate has been practically wiped out through the operations of gamblers in stock markets.

What possible excuse can there be for the governmental practice of permitting stock gamblers to place a valuation on an estate, and especially at a time when they are engaged in the wildest speculative orgy in the country's history? There may be legal sanction for the practice, but there can be no possible excuse in right and justice.

Still, there can be no denial that such a course is in perfect step with the trend of recent years "to soak the rich."

It's somewhat hard to understand why the actress, who is suing young Philip Morgan Plant, of New York, for $350,000 for breach of promise, is so moderate in her demands. Why, he inherited the major portion of the $15,000,000 fortune of his father!

Economy Is Up to Congress.

It is difficult for those not wise to the peculiar ways of politics-playing congressmen to understand what objections there could be to President Hoover's reasonable proposal for working out a plan of federal economy. He has acquitted himself of his responsibility in the matter by initiating action. It is wholly unreasonable to criticize him for not attempting to put through an economy program lone-handed. That would be impossible.

Any economies worth the name must be effected by passage of new legislation. That is congress' job, a job which it has neglected persistently for seven years, as Mr. Hoover has shown. If there really be a sincere intention to save money, the President has pointed the way. In one message he outlined his program roughly and in two succeeding messages he cleared up points which were not understood. Now he has completed performance of his responsibilities in the matter by inviting the house economy committee to meet with him to hear his specific recommendations.

No straddling, star-gazing or deliberate confusion of the issue can hide the fact that the responsibility for authorizing a complete program of economy at Washington rests squarely on the shoulders of congress, and nowhere else.

The Illinois Central railroad is showing up in Chicago a Pullman sleeper of new design, each berth of which is provided with a shelf for baggage and each upper berth with a staircase with handrail leading to it, a "roomy" dressing platform and a dormer window, hinged at the top that it may be raised to the required height, and a sliding sash ventilator. The outline of the top of the new car must partake somewhat of that of the giraffe cage in the circus.

While not questioning the story of federal prohibition agents, that a bar was operated "wide open" while the Ohio State Bar association met in a Cincinnati hotel last January, we utterly refuse to credit their statement that they found 1,000 bottles of liquor and thirty cases of beer left when they made their raid. It isn't reasonable.

From 1917 until the end of the present fiscal year the government will have expended about $23,517,000,000 more than it collected from taxes and other ordinary sources of revenue. Of course, a lot of the money expended went up in smoke, a lot in experimentation, a lot in cost-plus-ten-per-cent. construction and very probably a lot in graft during war time or shortly thereafter, but even at that the course which has been followed is not one which can be commended as a way to national stability and riches.

SPRING!

Editorial Opinion.

"CROCODILE TEARS."

The latest sensation in literature is not a new story about George Washington, showing that he was ever so much lower than the angels, it is not a posthumous thriller by Edgar Wallace, it is the debunking of the crocodile. The London Lancet has come out with an article in which it denies that there is a scintilla of truth in the tales of ancient travelers that crocodiles shed bitter tears over the fate of the victims they devour. The crocodile, says the Lancet, is unable to weep either emotional or mechanical tears. Scientists, it seems, have applied the onion test, but not a tear was shed; even a decoction of onion juice and salt proved unavailing. The great lizard remained dry-eyed, possibly holding its sides lest it should burst out in unseemly laughter over the sage's discomfiture.

But now, in reply to the Lancet, a gentleman writes to the New York Times that the crocodile does weep and that, moreover, it does precisely what Herodotus or some other early traveler described; it weeps while bolting juicy morsels of its prey. He does not go so far as to vouch for the statement of old Robert Burton, in the "Anatomy of Melancholy" that "it will add sobs, fiery sighs and sorrowful countenance," but he does affirm that there is no possible doubt about the tears. In his opinion, however, the creature does not weep out of compassion. "To demonstrate crocodile tears," he says, "it is only necessary to feed a hungry alligator a piece of meat just a little too large to be swallowed whole. While the reptile strains to gulp down a too large mouthful tears will be squeezed from its eyes in a most amusing way."

Perhaps the most interesting thing in the dispute is the theory upon which the Lancet went about its debunking crusade. It assumed that a crocodile would react to the onion test precisely as a human being does, as if all eyes in creation were affected by onions in the same way. It may be that to a crocodile an onion's odor is as bland and delightful as that of a rose is to us. What the Lancet should have done was to drop its reporter into the crocodile pool in the zoo, thus providing the same kind of a stimulus to the saurian that an Ethiopian did when the first naturalist recorded the astonishing fact. When you think that a crocodile would be almost sure to strangle on a reporter and consequently bathe him in a flood of tears, we feel that the Lancet missed a great opportunity to establish once for all the truth about the matter. Instead, it blundered egregiously.—Boston Transcript.

WITCHES OF TODAY.

Rural police in the Danube basin in central Europe are having difficulty in preventing crimes of violence against supposed witches. In fact the whole region seems to have become witch-minded.

Aged crones have seized upon local superstition and gained pin money by selling charms to the populace. Recently a young woman sued a witch in the courts of Jugoslavia for false representation in a love charm. She asserted that she had exhausted her savings in order to obtain a mysterious powder which was guaranteed to stimulate the affections of her army sergeant lover. But when her fiance suffered a change of heart and departed, she wanted her money back.

Near the village of Novoselice in eastern Slovakia the opportune arrival of the gendarmie saved the life of an old woman who was about to be burned at the stake as a witch by irate neighbors. It was declared that she had cast spells on children, causing them to return late from school and in some instances causing them to disappear entirely.

Barbaric as all this may appear to most of us, we must remember that the pursuit of witches lent excitement to the early history of New England. And even in this enlightened twentieth century we sometimes hear of alleged sorceresses being persecuted in isolated communities in this country. The veneer of modern civilization is pretty thin in spots.

When some disaster unaccountable to simple minds occurs, an explanation is demanded. If an antique dame of weird and uncomprehended customs happens to live thereabouts, suspician may unhappily center on her. Her eccentricities may be unjustly recalled and colored by prejudice.

The problem with which the police are struggling in the Danube basin is a very old one. There can be no cure but complete education, and that admittedly will require a long time.—Providence Journal.

"Examination Panic."

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

As the season approaches for promotion examinations in the schools many cases of "examination panic" appear among the older pupils. This state of mind is referred to by the scientists as the "inferiority complex." Among its symptoms are a loss of morale, a feeling of fear and a despair of the power to make good in the coming tests.

In certain cases this fear is well-grounded. A student who has neglected his studies for months can hardly hope that a few weeks of "cramming" will enable him to pass a brilliant examination. But there are many diligent workers who are thoroughly familiar with their subjects, yet whose courage has departed. So profound is their despair that they have lost the initiative to review the subjects required for promotion or graduation.

This loss of courage may be due partly to physical causes. A thorough medical examination may reveal some functional or organic defect responsible for the mental condition.

The average adolescent is careless regarding personal hygiene. The rules of health mean little to him, and he often looks with disdain at the men in training for athletics. Nevertheless, loss of adequate sleep, haphazard meals, too much coffee, too many cigarets, and sometimes indulgence in alcoholic beverages are sure to injure the health, and, beyond this, they destroy the mental poise.

Children who apply for working papers in the cities must pass a physical test. The teeth must be put in order and eye defects must be corrected by glasses before they are considered fit to enter the business world.

Would it not be reasonable to insist on a similar physical test a few weeks before examination time for the pupils who continue in school? This procedure would discover conditions demanding correction. By their correction the students would materially aid their chances for promotion.

The wise physician is capable of discovering functional disorders which are responsible for an abnormal mental attitude. For example, constipation and its resulting auto-intoxication will produce a mental dullness that is destructive to good judgment and clear thinking. Loss of sleep will give brain fag.

Eye strain frequently results from night studying. To avoid this, the light should be so placed as to give proper illumination. Eye strain may be complicated by severe headaches, which are relieved when the patient rests the eyes for a few hours. Rest glasses may be needed, even though no actual eye defects demand correction.

A neglected head cold or obstinate nasal obstruction may account for mental dullness. We all recognize the stupidity of the child with adenoids, but we are apt to ignore similar conditions among the older young people in our schools and colleges.

Reassurance and encouragement by a physician who has gained the confidence of a student will do wonders in helping him to carry on. Many a child will be able to make the grade if some one he believes in and respects assures him that he is fully able to work.

Let us give thought to these matters. By so doing we will relieve a lot of mental distress.

As a [illegible] lesson in the difficult business of [illegible] a colonial empire, the prize must be awarded to the Hollander. No one who has visited Holland's East India possessions can help but be amazed by the efficiency and downright [illegible] statecraft that the Dutch wield over their valuable and far-flung territory. Although the Dutch government is essentially autocratic, there is no evidence to be found of [illegible] in its possessions. There is little attempt to use force, the iron-hand-in-the-velvet-glove policy is maintained by keeping the local [illegible] on their thrones, loading them with honors and gifts and so make the natives think that these princes really do rule. But the Dutch-man holds the reins. There is a colonial house of representatives which assembles in Batavia. This body is not legislative, but is an advisory group on the military, financial and state affairs that affect the 35,000,000 population of Java. There is one Hollander to every 325 natives.

Many tourist-the world travelers return again to visit Java, many traveling by steamer from Singapore sailing through the Straits into the Java sea to Batavia. Landing at Tanjong Priok, the harbor, the five-mile trip to Batavia yields the visitor villages thickly-foliaged tropical gardens of villages, thickly-foliaged tropical [illegible] and brilliant blooms everywhere. It is [illegible] to believe that there are over 5,000 [illegible] species of trees and plants, and so for the botanist the place is a paradise. In the city itself as a marked contrast to its [illegible] environs, there are shaded, asphalted streets, fine houses, banks, stately governmental buildings and all the sights and sites that go to make up a city that boasts a world trade.

The upper modern town in Batavia is known as Weltevreden and in that suburb are grouped the [illegible] homes and government buildings set in wide, shady avenues planted with tamarind trees, palms and plane trees. Every beautiful [illegible] seems to be set in a botanical garden, so rich is the flora and so beautifully is it [illegible].

The suburb is intersected by canals, which to the Dutchmen there, must be productive of much pleasure. The museum, a handsome group of buildings in Grecian style, is famous in the world of science. From the central court there are rooms that contain rare treasures and are a veritable history of Java. In the famed Treasure chamber are gold, silver and jeweled articles—a collection that is unique and comprehensive. One visits the museum because it is one of the sights, but one returns again and again to view its beautifully grouped treasures.

The fashionable street is known as the "Rijswijk" or "Rice Town," and contains the leading clubs and the most elaborate homes set in richly flowered oriental gardens. A pleasant walk of about an hour's duration is to be had in encircling the "King's" square, interested by broad and attractive streets and avenues. Here the smart world drives and promenades, for it is the main center of the island's social life. The recreation grounds known as Deca park are well worth a visit. Purposely the square is rather bare of foliage and it is not only a relief to the visitor sated by constant views of tropical growth, but it permits the really fine buildings and grand houses to be seen to the best advantage.

In Waterloo square is the palace that houses the administrative offices and the high court of justice. The really excellent municipal band gives well attended concerts in this spruce. The jewel-like Wilhelmina park is quiet and restful quite belieing the fact that there is a fort in the center that is used as an arsenal. The hotels are up to date and all have cool and restful gardens in which to linger after sightseeing is over. Of course, the person who can not stand tropical life and climate should avoid a visit to Java, but for those who can stand heat, a visit should not be foregone if one is seeking that elusive "something different" that always beckons from afar, but so rarely fulfils its promise upon closer acquaintanceship.

He Shook His Hand Against Bribery.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH

The report of the special legislative committee appointed in 1884 to investigate reports of crookedness in the government of the city of Cincinnati, contains references to Judson Harmon, afterward governor of the state, but then a practicing attorney of Cincinnati, that shows the rugged honesty of the man as it came afterward to be known in many other ways.

Among other matters dug into at Cincinnati was the application of an electric light company for a franchise. Judge Harmon was its attorney and made application to council. For some reason no action was taken; the matter simply hung fire. As a witness before the legislative committee, Judge Harmon testified that while matters were in this condition he met Thomas Shay one day in the probate court room, and Shay said to him that he would never be able to get his ordinance before the board of public improvements, and after some further talk about the project inquired of Judge Harmon: "What would it be worth to have that passed?"

Judge Harmon testified that he immediately left Shay and that evening he wrote him a "scoring" letter. Shay was a lawyer also, criminal defenses and litigation connected with the city forming the bulk of his business. Further Judge Harmon testified that he met Shay by accident the next day, and Shay said to him that he was a very sensitive man to be representing corporations doing that kind of business. An indignant reply from Judge Harmon brought the conversation to and end, and the matter was not discussed between them again.

Shay was a witness and admitted the conversation with Judge Harmon, but denied that there was any suggestion of bribery in what he said. What he intended to convey to Judge Harmon's mind was that he, Harmon, was too busy with other law matters to follow up this ordinance application as would be necessary to get it through, and he, Shay, being on the ground continually, could for fair compensation manage it efficiently.

New York Day by Day.

New York, April 9—Sitting here imi[illegible] human sponge I wonder what gave [illegible] quaint notion I could hail a taxi in t[illegible] I've been trying it, man and boy, for yea[illegible] no luck. And here I am sopping and[illegible] hour to reach the printer with this.

Get wet and what happe[illegible] wind dies down every time. I'd like to [illegible] where those women are gabbing and [illegible] myself like the Sealyham on the porc[illegible]

GREET GOTHAM WITH SMILES

Whether it is the returning American wanderer or the foreigner visiting these hospitable shores for the first time, passengers from Europe who sail into New York harbor invariably beam a great big smile when Gotham's skyline heaves in sight. Above at left is Sally O'Neill, screen actress, returning from a European vacation. Sally is wearing the usual happy expression which seems to say "Depression regardless, there's no place like home." At right and looking no less happy is Mlle. Alice Roberte, French actress, who is here for a month's vacation.

Just Things

Spring Styles

AREN'T the spring styles intriguing? Polka dots we are told head the parade with spotted effects in small floral designs for a runner-up. Fashion as one "stylist" puts it is on the up and up. Necklines are wrapped, draped or otherwise entwined about the throat and waistlines are back where they used to be when you sneaked up behind your grandmother and untied her apron string and made a safegetaway before her wrath broke. But what we like best is the news that capes are really in. Not that we expect to wear one but like the cat that looked at the king, we can admire them. Shoulder capes have the call and they may be of sealskin, caracul, broadtail, mink, lapin, kidskin or what kind of a pelt can you promote. They are capes and capes and they will remind some folks of the beribboned and "beheaded" capes with those fetching pleated collars which stood up so bewitchingly when parasols with wide, lacy ruffles were as much a part of milady's costume as the bird upon her hat. And who, we ask, didn't get a thrill out of the military cape, a few blue moons later?

...k all you want about ... emotions, but, ... me right- the one that ... higher than the top of ... jealousy. I know—I've ... perpetual grouch—cell- ... should be sleep- ... mmes of getting the ... and a raft of other insan- ... symptoms, and you get ... bird all caged up for a ...

... case? Oh I don't mind ... over and gone long ... sleep well and feel dis- ... toward prohibition, as ... bootlegger delivers ...

... Mabel (of course ... name in the case - ... was certainly the ... of those girls that ... about but hardly ever see. Fresh as a daisy with a pink- ish tint that only health can deliver; not very tall but with a smile and a dash that made you glad you had to pick her up to kiss her. Nice girl—

I had always pictured Mabel as sitting on the edge of one of those million-dollar sink-or-swim chairs, with me nestling down to solid comfort after a hard days work of matching up boxers and wrestlers and the rest. My idea of a home and comfort was Mabel singing through the house and bringing me to the mat when I'd flick some cigar ashes on the rug. "Now, Harry, remember that the rug is not an ash tray." One of those you know.

Well, the first time I began to feel wobbly and had visions of hitting the canvas for sure was about a year ago. An awful hot day and me swel- tering in the office just after having put through the deal for the welter championship fray. Freddie Carr—know him? I thought so. Rising architect. Nice boy. Interested in boxing. Well, he's with me, kayoed with laughter as I spill some funny yarns about boxers and fights I have seen, when in blows Mabel, cool as an east wind and lots sweeter.

"Well, well," I cries, "talk about prayers being answered. Here I was broadcasting heaven for relief from the weather and here's my an- swer—Mabel."

Mabel smiles and strokes the glist- ening dome that protects my million- dollar brains. Glancing up, I am hap to the fact that three is a crowd, for there's young Carr, making a noise like a goldfish that's been tumbled out of his natural habitat. It's a knockout for sure. Well, I make the two wise as to who's who and then the handwriting on the wall starts for me. They shake and say, I'm ready to have Carr as I note the time it takes him to unshackle Mabel's hand. And Mabel well she doesn't commit herself much, but she doesn't look a bit sad. I looked bad, eh?

Course I says 'So long to Carr as soon as possible and bundles Mabel off to a nice cool place to eat. Can't say as I enjoyed it much but even at that I had Mabel with me which is saying more than a mouthful.

"Nice boy Mr Carr," says Mabel. To which I only grunt- which is about the same way I answer a lot of fool questions about this same nice Mr Carr.

Funny thing how Mabel begins to develop a sudden interest in that of- fice of mine. But knowing Mabel could put a guy wise to why Freddie took to dropping in to see me occa- sionally I used to watch them, and, believe me it's a wonder that the undertaker wasn't called in. Jeal- ous—that's me and nothing else but. Not that their actions ever amounted to much, but, say, you'd think that I never existed when the pair of them were together. Mabel would look at Freddie and blush and smile and drop her violet lamps, and Freddie would act kind of nervous and stammer a few silly things about the weather. This kind of thing would go on until I'd have the presence of mind, in or- der to keep from hurting the boob, to hustle Mabel away. Oh, yes, Ma- bel let me.

I wasn't sleeping much those days, or eating either. In fact, the boys were saying that I wasn't looking well, either. I could see that 'n ess something happened pretty quick I was going to lose Mabel. Now los- ing Mabel was no friendly idea to me. No, sir! So it's only natural that the old bean should bet on the job. I finally arrived at the conclusion that keeping Mabel busy might have Freddie's hopes.

Sherman in his marathon to the sea had nothing on me in those days. First of all I buy a sporting eight- one of those that knock your eye blind the first time you amp it, and make you dead crazy to hop aboard for a spin. That's how it affected Mabel. Well, we burn up money and gas and see all the sights from Cape Cod to the Maine coast.

We break lobster claws and eat in jags at all the prominent inns with now and then a movie thrown in for good measure. About a month of this, and my bank account begins to resemble a Russian refugee. But why worry? I'm sitting on the top of the world. Freddie's forgotten and I, yours truly is about to pat himself on his manly shoulder when one day Mabel bursts into the office all excit- ed and flustered. For a moment she was tongue tied.

"Why the hysterics?" I parried. "Lose your powderpuff?"

"Harry," she cried, ignoring my question, "has Sally asked me. Honest?"

"Asked you- whadyermean. Talk American. I'm no linguist."

"Why, Freddie, of course and we're going to be married next week."

Suffering tomcats and angoras! Who-ee! But you should have heard me then. I never realized that I had the stuff. Every office window around was packed with faces, and now and then some- one would pipe up with "Man, can't that old geezer cuss!"

Well I run low on gas after a while had to for Mabel. Waltzes over and kiss the old bald top and put her arms around me, and coos. "Oh I come to the wedding—won't I?"

Did I get Sire I did. Gave the pair one a nice and a good check too. But- I had to give Mabel away she insisted. Oh I forgot to tell you Mabel's my only sister.

pipe. From his place he heard the welcome accorded Bobby, heard an indistinct gabble of voices as Maggie and her mother talked and laughed with Bobby and at him. But, pres- ently, Maggie's voice, petulant com- plaining, rose out of the muddle.

"Tain't much of a place we've got here, Bobby."

"The Worm" stirred uneasily. He was seeing the little parlor now as Maggie had taught him to see it- shabby and mean with its second hand furniture and cheap carpet. But they had meant home once, and Maggie had seemed to be as hungry for a home as he had been.

And she had made her contribu- tions—second-hand stuff, too, but "sacred to poor Harry," her first husband, as 'The Worm' had found. Not that he minded it much, though the morris chair, with its soft cush- ions, the bookcase, with its inviting books, promised comfort and relaxa- tion. But the phonograph! That was hardest to endure!

"There never was such a husband as Harry!"

"The Worm" could see her, gazing, misty-eyed at the portrait of her for- mer husband that hung in the place of honor, over the mantel shelf.

"I don't seem to remember that Harry was such-a-much," Bobby chal'enged. "You didn't have much that you didn't get out and earn your- self, either!"

"Bobby!" Maggie was on the defen- sive.

Harry's laugh warmed the very cockles of 'The Worm's' heart.

"The cat's neck-tie! You want to take that tone with someone who didn't know Harry! For the love of Lu, let me shut that old phono- graph off."

The instrument was strang'ed into silence just as it was telling the world for the third time: O Daddy, How We Miss You.

"Well, Harry was always good to me!" Maggie had said that to 'The Worm' morning, noon and night.

"He never got stuck up for wife- beating, I'll admit, but he knew how to hold you down. Maggie!" Bobby's laugh rang out again. 'The Worm' chuckled and moved up to the bend in the stairs. There he was nearer the parlor door.

'Well'- Bobby's every word was distinct now- 'you used to be a Tar- tar when you got to having a tan- trum! 'Slapping it out of you' was what Harry was always saying he'd do!"

Maggie chose to ignore this.

"He was good to me, just the same," she persisted, and 'The Worm' knew how her eyes must be flashing her chin straight out. "And he loved mother-"

"Sure he did!" Bobby's swift an- swer was replete with sarcasm. "A long way off I remember. The long- er, the better! He used to say so himself."

"How can you talk like that!" 'The Worm' wondered if Maggie would indulge in a tantrum now. Bobby had better get out before the storm broke.

Bobby must have thought so, too, for suddenly he came toward the par- lor door and as 'The Worm' slipped hastily down the stairs he heard the rather cool "Good by" that Maggie offered.

Down in the street The Worm stopped Bobby as that youth came from the house. "Hey! Was all that true- the things you said to Maggie up there?"

Bobby smiled into the pair eyes that searched his own. "Did you think I was giving her the air? Well, I didn't say half, not half."

"Tomorrow you take this chair all the other things that belonged to your first husband and put them in your mother's room. I don't like- ly to ever harm them none while you keep them there. Hereafter we'll use what I pay for."

"The idea!" Maggie appealed. "Mother!"

"We've talked it out ... I ... up quickly, moving a ... "I must go." She ... look at Dorcas. She put ... it, jammed her soft hat ... her head. "I wish you ... me," she cried hotly. "I wish I hadn't told you. Dave will never forgive me. Or you, per- haps." She followed Kitty to the door, and at the door she put out a hand and resolutely detained her.

"Kitty, you must know what Da- vid's doing now. They refused that other manuscript he sent to them, but they want him to write an- other. He's gone down to his place to start it. He's all enthusiasm over it. You wouldn't know him, Kitty. He's found himself."

"Poor old David," Dorcas had said. Later, thinking of this, Kitty struggled to smother a sympathy for David in her own heart. She did not think any more 'it isn't so.' Somehow, she knew, now, that it was so. The memory of count- less moments with David, expres- sions she had caught on his face, words he had not said, his concern and consideration came back to her with a new understanding.

He'd finished his book to prove himself to her. He was working desperately on another one.

And she couldn't share it with him! Dorcas had made that im- possible. "I'll never forgive her," Kitty thought, indignantly. She had no compassion for Dorcas who had admitted so frankly that she cared for David. "She's spoiled everything between David and me."

That Margery Crosby was going abroad in April became an estab- lished fact. Every one talked of it. Marge talked of it.

"Mother and I are going to travel during the summer, and then I'm going to stay in Paris."

"Stay, Marge? For the winter?"

"The rest of my life, perhaps." She said that, whenever she had a chance, always a little sadly, sug- gesting that she was seeking exile for some mysterious reason.

'Is Marge really going to live in Paris?' Kitty had asked Gar impulsively.

"How do I know what she'll do?" Gar had countered with such ob- vious annoyance as to silence Kitty leaving her troubled.

She noticed that Gar was moody and restless, these days. Her old torment of fear and unwilling sus- picion doubled.

One evening Gar did not come home for dinner or telephone. He came in about 8 o'clock, offering no explanation. No, he wasn't hungry. What did they have on for the night? Nothing? "Well, let's go to the movies. I don't want to sit here, doing nothing."

Kitty had an impulse to tell him she didn't feel like going to the movies. The waiting, the lonely din- ner served by Carley the little maid and finished alone, the long evening ahead, had worn her almost to a breaking point.

"You might at least tell me where you've been!" she said sharply.

"I stopped in at mothers.' You can't kick about that, can you?"

And she'd rather he'd said he had been with Marge! She did not answer him.

A round of informal parties in Marge's honor began. Every night Gar and Kitty joined the others to dance somewhere.

"We'll need to go to Bridgewater to rest," Kitty said to Gar, laugh- ing. "Why I've lost 10 pounds, I believe."

She was thinner; her bright color had gone. But Gar had not noticed.

The bridesmaid's dress had come from Felicia's. She put it on for Gar to see it.

"Isn't it lovely?"

And Gar said briefly that it was all right, he guessed. He'd scowled as if irritated by something.

Fear grew sharper in Kitty's heart, a nameless fear, for she would not give it any name. She had a sensation of fighting with empty hands, blindly. She was in- expressibly lonely; she realized sharply that after all these months in Winton she had no real friends! She would not go to Dorcas now. Carol, wrapped in her own trou- bles, was no comfort. She could not talk to David -and most of all she wanted to talk to David. She allowed herself a little angry re- sentment that David had been so stupid. He hadn't had any right to fall in love with her.

"Everything's so useless," she cried aloud one evening when she was dressing to go out with Gar. And the sound of the words frightened her. It was so.

"Go back to Bridgewater, call it a mistake." The words leaped out at her. What if she did?

And then Gar came in, hurrying.

"I'm sorry I'm so late, Kit. Ready? I won't take me a min- ute to fix."

She clung to him.

"Why, what's the matter, sweet? You're trembling."

"I guess I'm just horribly tired, Gar." That was it, of course. Her lips pressed Gar's, she felt humble, shaken.

"Do you want to go tonight? Sure you're up to it, Kit?" Gar was all concern.

She was not to tell him that she'd rather not go; she thought swiftly of an evening, alone with Gar-

"Isobel will understand. I'll tell her you're bushed."

"Oh I'll go. I'm all right, Gar." And then that nagging suspicion that maybe Gar rather go with- out her.

Paul Somerset was always one of every party. More often than not he escorted Marge. Kitty knew that the others laughed at his de- votion, commented on the indiffer- ence Marge showed him. And Gar, to Kitty, talked soothingly of him. After Isobel's party, talking it over, Gar said, "That big bounder, Somerset. I'd like to punch his face in for him."

"But why does Marge bother with him?"

Gar did not answer. She saw him scowl. She changed the subject quickly.

More and more she looked for- ward to the respite of two weeks in Bridgewater. Sara had written, "We're only going to spend a few days on our honeymoon, Kitty. We'll be back in a week at the longest. I hope you stay on for awhile. You can help me get set- tled."

"And afterwards I'll begin again." To think it was to admit failure but Kitty faced it honestly. Here everything was too muddled to see it clearly but there—some day she'd walk alone to the top of Cowper's hill, and think things out squarely. And then, perhaps, when she had herself in hand, she could talk it over with Gar. She'd be- gin: "It's my fault, partly, Gar—"

They'd move into a less expen- sive apartment; she'd budget their money again.

An errand took her into Strat- ton's and as was her custom when she went there she hunted out Josie for a moment's chat. Josie beamed on her.

"Say, if you'd come in a day later you wouldn't of found me here; Kitty. I'm going to be mar- ried." She said it loudly and the other girls, within hearing, smiled, but in a friendly way. Josie's love affairs were theirs.

Kitty rejoiced heartily with Josie. And when she left her it was with a deep respect for this girl who knew so well how to meet life.

She was thinking so intently of Josie that she did not see David, approaching, until he was con- fronting her, speaking her name.

"Oh—" The color rushed to her face.

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

Dicky Relieves Madge's Mind by Approving All Plans, and He and Harry Transform the Farmhouse Into a Fairy Bower for the Party.

"EDEE bringing a man along," Lillian asked me as I turned away from the telephone.

"Yes, her fourth cousin, Dr. Jim Paige," I answered.

"The way those Southerners hold on to their family relationships!" Lillian smiled. "I'll bet I have a hundred fourth cousins floating around the country, but I don't even know their names let alone their faces. However that's beside the point. He's probably up here to ask Ede to change her mind again. Well! Let's hope he's successful this time."

I silently echoed the hope and knew that, while a selfish desire to end the pursuit of Dicky that she had kept up so long was back of the hope, a feeling of genuine pity for Edith also entered into it. Her passion for Dicky was hopeless, and it made her a singularly lone- ly and unhappy woman, despite her undeniable attractiveness. Dr. Jim Paige had been her faithful suitor for years and I was worthy of any woman's love. If Edith could only compel her self to forget the folly that had robbed her life of happiness.

Dicky Approves the Plans

But I was careful to make no comment concerning Dr. Paige to Dicky when he returned, and he said no word concerning either Edith or her cousin except to say casually that they were driving down on Friday, and added with a truly conjugal captiousness:

"Now that you've got this fool party started, will you tell me where you're going to put 'em? Oh, I don't mean for the dinner and dance. Your plans will work out all right there. But do you realize that most of your guests are to be here for overnight?"

I took my courage in both hands, fortified by the knowledge that both Harry and Lillian were on the veranda where we were talking.

"I know," I said, "I certainly should be in a sad predicament if it were not for Hugh. He came over yesterday and offered The Larches for all of the men of the family and the masculine guests. That will leave the farmhouse just for the women, except for father. He, of course, will neither disturb anybody nor be disturbed. Wasn't it considerate of him?"

I did not see Lillian's elbow, but that it had prodded her husband's side successfully, I knew when his big voice rumbled:

"Mighty thoughtful, I say; don't you, Dicky-bird? Think of trying to get a shower or shave Friday after- noon, with the house full of wim- men in all stages of dress and un- dress!"

"Oh, sure!" Dicky piped in an ex- aggerated falsetto. "Old Hughie is just the dearest thing! And I shall be so pleased to enjoy his hospitali- ty. But it really is very decent of him." he finished in an ordinary tone, and I drew a deep breath, with a sense of danger skirted. But I was careful to have both Lillian and Harry with me later in the day when I told Dicky of Philip Veri- ann's plan to provide a little revue during the dinner.

"For the love of Abimelech! he exploded, "who's supposed to be giv- ing this party anyway, you or the neighbors?"

Lillian rose to rescue in the nick of time. "Dicky, you're a pig! Of course we're giving the party, and we're going to have the most wonderful time. Now, you're not to say another word about it."

Dicky looked from one to the other of us, and then he grinned. "Oh, all right, I'll be good. But I'll bet you'll be sorry you didn't take my advice."

"Why the hysterics?" I parried. "Lose your powderpuff?"

"Harry," she cried, ignoring my question, "has Sally asked me. Honest?"

"Asked you- whadyermean. Talk American. I'm no linguist."

"Why, Freddie, of course and we're going to be married next week."

Suffering tomcats and angoras! Who-ee! But you should have heard me then. I never realized that I had the stuff. Every office window around was packed with faces, and now and then some- one would pipe up with "Man, can't that old geezer cuss!"

Well I run low on gas after a while had to for Mabel. Waltzes over and kiss the old bald top and put her arms around me, and coos. "Oh I come to the wedding—won't I?"

Did I get Sire I did. Gave the pair one a nice and a good check too. But- I had to give Mabel away she insisted. Oh I forgot to tell you. Mabel's my only sister.

GIANTS, YANKS ONLY OTHER CLUBS PICKED AS POSSIBLE CHAMPS

Boston in National, Chicago in American Chosen as "Cellar Champions.

BY HERBERT W. BARRER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, April 9—If 67 of the nation's baseball writers can't be wrong, only the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Giants of the National league, and the Philadelphia Athletics and New York Yankees of the American, figure to have any chance of participating in the World series in October.

Briefly, the experts, casting ballots in The Associated Press' sixth annual major league pennant poll, pick the Cardinals and Athletics to repeat, with the Yankees strong second choice in the American league and the Giants lukewarm alternates in the National.

If the consensus is right the clubs will finish this way:

How They Line Up

National—St. Louis, New York, Chicago, Brooklyn, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Boston.

American — Philadelphia, New York, Washington, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Boston, Chicago.

The poll indicated strong faith in the ability of the Cardinals to win the league crown for the third year in a row. Forty-eight writers were content to string along with the world champions while 15 picked the Giants.

In the American league, the battle of ballots was much closer. Sixty-six of the 67 first place votes went either to the Athletics or the Yanks, the final count standing 38 for the A's and 28 for Joe McCarthy's men.

Tail-End Choices

Although the experts had little trouble picking the leaders, they ran into all kinds of difficulties in trying to rate the other members of each league. Particularly was this true in the National where Brooklyn, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Boston all received votes for the doubtful distinction of finishing in last place.

The voting was close for the last four positions in the American league but none of the four trailers, Detroit, St. Louis, Boston or Chicago, received votes for any position higher than fourth.

Training Camp Highlights

By The Associated Press

DETROIT — The New York Giants seem to have found an extra starting pitcher in Hal Schumacher, a big college youngster. He showed major league class yesterday. He weakened after eight great innings and allowed Detroit to put the tying and winning runs on base, but retired three men without a score.

• • •

The Brooklyn Robins' first encounter with the New York Yankees has left Manager Max Carey greatly encouraged. The Robins lost, 3-1, but Carey got excellent pitching from both Waite Hoyt and Bill Clark.

• • •

DETROIT — Charlie Gehringer's throwing arm, probably the most important single adjunct of the Detroit Tigers is quite all right. At least he said it was after a busy afternoon at second base yesterday in the home-coming exhibition game against the New York Giants.

• • •

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds and Cleveland Indians will open their annual exhibition series here today subject to an improvement in the weather.

The Reds' opportunity for revenge against the Indianapolis team of the American Association was shattered yesterday by a cold weather cancellation after the minor leaguers defeated them Thursday 8 to 2.

• • •

INDIANAPOLIS—Manager Lew Fonseca will use the "spot" system in juggling his White Sox pitchers this year. "Certain pitchers are more effective against certain clubs and weak against others, so I intend to use them where they can show the best instead of employing the old rotation method," Manager Fonseca said.

• • •

KANSAS CITY—Charlie Root has added a final argument in support of his right to pitch the National league opener for the Cubs against Cincinnati next Tuesday. Root polished off his delivery yesterday by holding the Kansas City Blues of the American Association scoreless and to three hits in five innings. The Cubs won 4 to 3.

EVANS LEADS PACK IN LINKS TOURNEY

By The Associated Press

FRENCH LICK, Ind., April 9—Charles "Chick" Evans, the "boy wonder of golf" 16 years ago, was in front of the field as the drive for the first Midwest amateur championship entered the second round today.

Evans waded through the rain yesterday to tally a 73 for the first 18-hole round to take a three shot lead in the 54-hole fight for the title. His closest rivals were Johnny Lehman of Chicago, Jimmy Manion of St. Louis and Bill Heinlein of Indianapolis, who had 76's. Doug Casey of Chicago was fifth with 77 and Jack Westland of Chicago, national amateur finalist at Beverly last year was one shot behind him.

Change Knockout Rule

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 9—Following the precedent it set in declaring that Billy Petrolle defeated Rat Battalino in 12 rounds instead of scoring a technical knockout over the Hartford battler, the New York State Athletic commission has revised its rule concerning knockouts. Only when the count of 10 is tolled over a boxer will he be called a knockout victim.

Country Club Opens

Unless some unkind weather steps in and messes up prearranged plans, devotees of the ancient Scottish game, which would best be recognized under the general heading of golf, will get their first official taste of action today as the Marion Country club opens its fairways to club members and their guests for the season of 1932. Incidentally the roughs will be thrown open at the same time and I have an idea the latter will be in far greater demand than the former, at least for the present.

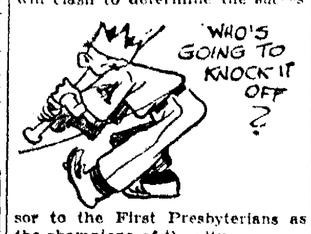
The weather outlook for the official opening is not something which would cause any shouts of delight, at least not at the time this outburst is being written. However, the general impression is that weather will have little to do with how many players make the rounds of the course today. Golfers are that way in the spring of the year — or most any other season. They'd just as leave hammer the sphere around in the midst of a roaring gale on a rain soaked course as they would on the most ideal day. Think of the alibi bad weather provides for not breaking 90 and the reason quickly becomes obvious. Or don't you alibi when your score card total reads something like 110? Not much.

Mar-O-Del Popular

The Country club will be stealing a short march on the Mar-O-Del club here by opening today. The Mar-O-Del, the only public layout in Marion, will not officially launch the 1932 season until Sunday. However, this does not detract from the Mar-O-Del's importance to the local golfing world. The Country club is a private organization and the average links fan here depends on the Mar-O-Del to provide a place for the outlet of his golfing energies. The Mar-O-Del has rapidly increased in popularity since its construction two years ago. Men and women are both playing over its nine holes in increasing numbers. With the constant improvement which is being made in it, the course stands a good chance of becoming one of the most popular in this section. Its only drawback is the lack of natural hazards. Artificial hazards however, assure an interesting game for any who play the course.

Softball Marks Time

Exactly one month from today the recreation baseball season will be launched here. Thirty-two teams will battle for the championships of four circuits and when these titles are decided, the four winners will clash to determine the successor to the First Presbyterians as the champions of the city.



Softball, as the game has become generally known here, is the most popular of local sports. There are undoubtedly more participants than in any other game here. Figuring an average of 20 players to the squad there are at least 640 competitors in the four organized loops. This figure, however, does not recognize the fact there are a number of duplications as one player may play on two teams. Add to the 640 contestants in the four organized leagues those who play in independent circles and those interested non-players and you will gain some idea of the game's immense popularity.

Starting Monday The Star will commence a series of stories dealing with the outlook for the various teams competing in the four city circuits. The teams of the No. 1 Sunday school league will come first. The series will run until near the opening date of the season.

A Livelier Ball

Marion diamond fans who get their principal enjoyment out of watching some local bambino sock the horsehide out the park for a four base trip may get a bigger quota of thrills this season than in former years if the commission adopts a new ball which has been offered by a local store. The ball in question is tighter wound than the one used the last two seasons and as a result may be counted on to produce more hits of the long variety. The commission has taken no action on the official ball for the season as and will not until the next meeting on April 20.

When fans remember the sizzling hot liners that were constantly being smashed through the infield almost every game last season, they may also wonder just what chance a fielder is going to have should a new and even livelier ball is adopted. It looks like the outfielders in particular are going to be in for some busy evenings—when and if the new sphere becomes official.

Anything to make the game more interesting has been the motto of the commission in the past and the board will probably be guided by the same motive when it decides which ball to use this season.

COLLEGIATE SOCK!

Uncle Sam May Have "Rah Rah" Boys on Olympic Fight Team.

By The Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., April 9—The college boys served definite notice today that Uncle Sam's 1932 Olympic boxing team may be dominated for the first time by youths from the halls of learning.

The two-day tournament of the National Collegiate association to develop college material for Olympic team try-outs in San Francisco July 20, 21 and 23, has passed into the semi-final stage, and 32 youngsters stand eligible to oppose army, navy and amateur athletic union qualifiers for places on the team.

Probably the college ranks never before have gathered together such an array of talent as opened the tournament in the Penn state gymnasium yesterday with 66 entries from 33 colleges and universities.

Thirty-two battles featured the opening day, eight of them ending in knockouts.

STRONG MAN ACT IS SCHEDULED MONDAY

Individuals who are interested in feats of strength will get a chance Monday to see an interesting exhibition on Center street between Main and State, Walter Podolak, who claims to be the strongest man in the world will put on the demonstration. Podolak will pull four heavy automobiles on Center street with his teeth.

Podolak is scheduled to wrestle Monday night at the Steam Shovel gym in the main go of the weekly card. The strong man claims to hold a record of having lifted 660 pounds dead weight. The Monday afternoon exhibition on Center street will take place about 1 p. m.

RULES COMMITTEE CONSIDER CHANGES

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 9—The basketball rules committee will decide today what, if any, changes in the code it will make to speed up the game.

The elimination of "stalling" is the main objective. Particular interest centers on the "center line" recommendation of the national coaches' association which met in Chicago recently.

This rule would require a team obtaining the ball in its own back court to work it across a line bisecting the center of the court within 10 seconds on pain of losing it on an out-of-bounds ruling.

CARDINALS READY FOR GONG; EXPECT NO "PUSHOVERS" IN COMING CAMPAIGN

BY GABBY STREET
(Manager, St. Louis Cardinals)
By The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS—Condition is the vital factor in the strength of a ball club. The last two seasons, in which the Cardinals won two National league pennants and one world's championship, we started with a group of athletes in fine shape physically. The 1932 team will be on edge when the flag drops for the coming race.

It is fortunate the Cardinals are in first rate condition for the long, hard campaign ahead. I cannot detect any soft spots in the league. The Reds, it was said, were easy for us last year. True, we beat them in a lot of games, but most were won by a close margin. Dan Howley will have a much stronger club this season, with Babe Herman around to furnish a badly-needed bunch.

Young Hurler Impressive

No matter how tough the going might be, we are starting with another great club. Among our young pitchers, Dean and Carleton look impressive, but we must rely on our veterans. We expect to carry nine pitchers.

Dean has made no trouble this year. He is working hard and obeying all rules, and though he reported for spring training while still sick with influenza he will be ready to go when the season gets under way.

I am happy over the way Jesse Haines' arm has come around. I really believe the old reliable will carry on again this year. It means a lot to us.

Another thing worth noting is that Flint Rhem looks great this year. He will win a lot of games before the summer is over.

Jimmy Collins, who last year understudied Bottomley at first base, will start in left field in the place of Hafey, a holdout. Jimmy is a real hitter. I plan to give Hunt a real trial. I expect Pepper Martin to have a big year. He's a great boy.

The Cards have a great infield prospect in Eddie Delker. I have thought for two years that he is a real player. He will be ready any time we need him, but the combination we had last year will start.

Though we are going up against two or three very tough clubs, I honestly believe they will find it necessary to beat a well-conditioned, fighting and more powerful club than last year.

Like plucking rabbits out of a hat, the St. Louis Cardinals keep producing new star righthanders. Last year the club sprung the sensational Paul Derringer on the National league, and this season Manager Gabby Street promises opposing sluggers plenty of headaches from looking at the shoots of Dizzy Dean and Tex Carleton. Both boys were brought up from Houston.

TORONTO FAVORED TO CAPTURE CROWN

By The Associated Press

TORONTO, April 9—The Toronto Maple Leafs were overwhelming favorites today to win the Stanley cup trophy after defeating the New York Rangers twice in succession on foreign ice. Most of their followers felt confident that they would finish the job tonight with a third straight victory. If not, they can try again next Tuesday and Thursday and the odds are all in favor of their winning one out of the three games.

A. B. C. PIN TOURNEY WILL CLOSE SUNDAY

Three Changes Occur Friday Among Leaders; 63 Teams Roll Tonight.

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, April 9—The last lap in the race for the world's team crown in the annual American Bowling Congress tournament begins tonight when 63 lineups swing into action.

Tomorrow night the remaining 64 of the 2,336 teams comprising the entry list will toe the foul line.

Three changes occurred yesterday in the team event. The Greek Cab company of Cleveland, scored a 3,009 total on games of 985, 978 and 1046 to push their way into fifth place, one pin behind the Chene-Trombley lineup of Detroit.

Martin Kavanaugh of Cincinnati New Golf Pro at Country Club

WHEN some irate golfing member of the Marion Country club suddenly makes the awful discovery this summer that his tee shots are slicing off somewhere into the great beyond and that his iron shots are doing little more than tear up a goodly portion of the fairway, the youthful looking individual pictured in connection with this story is going to be in for some hurry up visits. Martin Kavanaugh, Marty then, if you'd rather use his nickname, is the gentleman, and he has been entrusted with the duties of being golf professional at the Country club this summer.

Kavanaugh comes to the Country club to take up the task of directing the nine-hole layout after having served five seasons as professional at the Three Rivers Country club in Cincinnati. He will have complete charge of the local Country club course. Besides providing instruction for club members, Kavanaugh will operate a complete equipment shop at the course.

Kavanaugh is only 27 years of age now although he has been a golf professional for the last 10 years. He entered the pro classification at the age of 17, and for a time was one of the youngest pros in the state. He is married. While he is occupying his post as club professional, Mrs. Kavanaugh will be in charge of the club house at the course.

CARPENTIER PLANS TO TRY "COMEBACK"

NEW YORK, April 9—The name of Georges Carpentier has been added to the list of veteran boxers who plan to try the "comeback" feat.

The French heavyweight who was knocked out by Jack Dempsey eleven years ago, started his campaign to return to the ring yesterday. Carpentier plans two months of training and then two or three trial bouts in Europe.

If Youngstown enters, Frank Roscoe, vice president of the Akron club, said a franchise will be sought for one other city, probably Mansfield, O., or Gary or Hammond, Ind.

WHEAT SCORES EARLY GAIN

Price Advances Three Cents a Bushel as Chicago Market Opens.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, April 9—Wheat scored 3 cents a bushel advance at the market opening today

Sensational big shrinkage in the official forecast of 1932 domestic winter wheat production led to a rush of buying that swept values upward

Opening 1@3 higher wheat afterward held near the initial range Corn started ½-1½ up and continued firm

It had generally been expected that the government crop estimate would point to a decided curtailment of wheat production figures but there were few if any traders who looked for a slash of 42,000,000 bushels as compared with the latest unofficial forecasts Taken especially in connection with lateness of spring wheat seeding the government report was regarded on all sides as giving an immediate basis for higher prices

Confidence of the bull element was further augmented owing to the fact that the new official crop estimates were reported as having been largely responsible for declines in securities at New York and in wheat quotations at Liverpool before the wheat market here opened

Foreign buying of Chicago wheat future deliveries was a conspicuous feature Simultaneously it was indicated that all overnight offerings of North American wheat for export to Europe had been accepted Despite word that drizzles in some places southwest indicated a possible general breakup of dry weather wheat price reactions were slight and were soon succeeded by fresh advances putting the market about 3½ cents over yesterdays finish The market developed into a continued broad general purchasing affair with individual operations almost lost sight of Corn and oats borrowed strength from wheat

Provisions reflected the action of cereals

BARKING AROUND THE WORLD

It is not every dog that can bark and have the sound of his own voice go around the world, sneak up behind him and start an argument. But that's what happened to "Shorty," this wirehaired terrier, who recently barked into a microphone at Schenectady, N. Y. The bark was broadcast by short wave to Holland, relayed to Java, thence to Australia and back to the Schenectady studio. His own voice, coming from the loud speaker after its 24,000-mile journey, startled "Shorty," who thought another dog was trying to horn in on his program and increased his vocal efforts to outshine the other.

A PARADISE FOR BANDITS

The sign "Nobody Home" hanging on the door of the Collingswood, N. J., police station must have puzzled transients who passed through the town recently. The station was shut up for a day after Mayor Joseph H. van Meter (inset) had suspended the entire force of 22 policemen, charging that the department was run by "four or five politicians." However, after the town had been copless for a day, the mayor reconsidered and reinstated the police force under pressure of public opinion.

REPORT HANE HAD ACCOMPLICE, DENIED

Mouser Makes Statement After Conference with Former Cashier in Toledo.

Grant E Mouser, counsel for the receiver of the Marion National bank, this morning absolutely denied the implication contained in a news dispatch from Toledo that H W. Hane, former cashier of the bank, had accomplices in the embezzlement of $90,000.

Mouser yesterday afternoon conferred with Hane, now in the Lucas county jail awaiting removal to Leavenworth prison to begin a seven-year sentence for embezzlement The news dispatch indicated that Hane might have had accomplices followed the conference.

The sole purpose of the conference, Mouser said, was to obtain information from Hane, before he is taken to Leavenworth, pertaining to the possible civil liability to the receiver, if any, of several concerns, and to obtain a full picture of the case.

Present at the conference with Hane yesterday were Mouser, C. A. Jones, receiver of the bank, Ralph Martin of Columbus, special counsel for the comptroller of the currency, and Lee Murlin, United States attorney.

Federal officers indicated to Mouser yesterday that Hane will be removed to Leavenworth in a few days.

Speaking in regard to progress being made in liquidating the bank's assets, Mouser this morning said that Hane's bonding company recently paid $25,000 bond which Hane furnished as cashier.

New Zealand is estimated to have 2,500,000 horsepower available in its water courses and has increased its development more than tenfold since 1925, chiefly in state owned plants.

DRESS WELL EVERY DAY, WRITER URGES

"Glad Rags" Are Tonic for Depression, Women of France Are Told.

PARIS—(INS)—Dress up! Put on your glad rags every day not only on Sundays and fete days and keep on all during these days of economic stress.

This is the advice given to pretty Parisiennes by Maurice de Waleffe, writing in the 'Paris Soir'

"This is positively no time for the French woman to economize on her clothes," says de Waleffe "With all the other great cities of the universe growing darker and duller every day, this is precisely the moment for Paris to become brighter and better than ever, an oasis of beauty which will attract visitors from the four points of the globe and hold them here

"During the years of great penitence in Europe, America and Asia, we are going to see who will be the first to be sacrificed on the altar of general economy, or who will hold out to the end and suffer the least. All depends upon the Parisienne, who is the point of attraction of Paris '

Nothing would be more stupid thinks the writer, than to close the de luxe shops and for the women to stop spending The orders already made to economize will not be obeyed any more than the law of prohibition in the United States he says, because man is compelled to seek beauty and gaiety in some corner of the world

'This is our specialty. We French are the merchants par excellence of feminine beauty and charm It is certainly not the moment to throw our merchandise overboard'

Book Reviews

TURNING NEW PAGES

WITH EDNA S. DUTTON

SOMETHING different is to be found in Sheila Macdonald's story of life in South Africa which she has chosen to call "Sally in Rhodesia. One can not help liking Sally, and neither can one help sharing her joys and difficulties in that far land in which she found so many new experiences. The volume is made up of letters from Sally to her mother and the author does not spare herself in her intimate picture which, while it may lack a plot, is brimming with adventure.

Born in New Zealand and then spending her married life in Rhodesia Sally's story affords changing scenery. She goes to South Africa to marry big, lumbering Scotch Toby and it is not a gold mine she finds but a grocery store which provides a means of livelihood. Four babies arrive before Fifi is three years old, Bill and John being twins. How many black kitchen boys and Kaffir cooks she tries with their impossible habits and antics furnish a good problem in mathematics.

The humor of the situation, the heartbreaks of a new housekeeper and a new mother, the training of a husband all are pictured in this story of real life.

Reminiscences in Dashwood Book

"I AM afraid that ladies are a dying race" says Mary in Jane Dashwood's "The Month of May" published by The Century Co. "I sometimes try and remember the 14 points of a gentlewoman in which your mother and aunts were brought up," continues Mary who although she had her mother's conversation by heart, knew also that nothing restored her more quickly to good temper than an excursion to the golden age when women were refined, virtuous and domesticated, when children revered their parents, servants were faithful to their mistresses, great estates passed in security from one generation to another and neither motor cars, nor 'that silly flying' disfigured the heavens and the earth.

"A lady should take an hour to get up and an hour to go to bed A lady removes her stays twice at night and [illegible] again next morning A lady does not powder her nose in public [illegible] before breakfast, my aunt A[illegible] used to say should be [illegible] Christian gentlewoman A lady keeps her eyes on the ground when she goes walking A lady never climbs a stile before a gentleman A lady does not eat [illegible] A lady should know how to cut [illegible] every lady in those days could [illegible] beautifully [illegible] played the harp and worked exquisite embroideries And of course they all adored their fathers who [illegible] forbade any of them to [illegible] Arbitrary?
